No matter how expert or experienced we are technically, or how many years we have spent training, teaching or learning our jobs, one of the most challenging aspects of being a leader is connecting with others and getting our messages across effectively. This cross-cultural and cross-industry challenge is omnipresent and your time with Alex Selwood will help you look at this puzzle in a unique and stimulating way. You will have the opportunity to explore real-life issues that you come across daily.

By the end of the session you will have:

- Explored the barriers to communication, and some simple ways to break through them
- Appreciated the differences in communication style, and how to flex your approach to others
- Developed a personal plan on how best to manage your workflow
- Connected with other colleagues in your field and shared ideas and strategies for success in this field

Your facilitator: Alex Selwood

Alex has been a business facilitator since 1994, following a successful commercial career with Mars Confectionery. Prior to this, he was an explosives and mining engineer working on coal and gold projects in the UK and South Africa.
